

Quintet of new Koca Nolas discovered

by Charles D. Head

They keep coming out of the woodwork of the past: Five Koca Nolas new to the bottle collecting world have emerged.

Charles Comolli, a collector from Elberton, Ga., owns Koca Nolas from his hometown and Hartwell, Ga. Donnie Medlin of Louisburg, N.C., now known far and wide as one of the nation's premier Pepsi-Cola collectors, owns a Louisburg Koca Nola. There also may be one from Talbotton, Ga.

Kenneth Cornett of Rockford, Tenn. sent in an advertisement from the Maryville (Tenn.) Bottling Works. The ad reads: "Have you heard the news? The Maryville Bottling Works Co., have (sic) purchased the entire plant of the 'Wildwood Bottling Works' and with added improvements, are now ready to handle all orders promptly. Try their line of Soda Pops, Cascade Ginger Ale, Orerade and Koca Nolas, and you will be pleased and your customers satisfied. GIVE THEM A TRIAL. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED."

The advertisement was carried in the April 11, 1907 issue of the Maryville Enterprise.

Mr. Cornett said he owns eight different soda bottles, including a Hutchinson, from the Maryville Bottling Works, which was in business from 1907-1943. He has yet to see one embossed Koca Nola. There may be one out there, but the plant also may have used just a Koca Nola label affixed to one of its own bottles.

If you count the Anacostia (Washington, D.C.), the total number of Koca Nola franchises now known total 30, with Georgia alone accounting for 11 of them: Ashburn, Atlanta, Augusta, Bagley, Donalsonville, Elberton, Hartwell, Macon, Milledgeville, Rome and Talbotton.

That number is impressive when you consider that just a few years ago, I had heard of only the J. Esposito bottles from Philadelphia and a few others. I still would love to hear from other collectors who may know of even more. They can write either to me, or to Bill Baab, who edits my copy for these stories and has started a Koca Nola collection of his own. Our addresses are at the end of this article.

Both the Elberton and Hartwell bottles are in clear glass and each has some damage.

The Hartwell bottle is embossed REGISTERED on the front shoulder and NABERS BOTTLING WORKS / Koca Nola (in script) / HARTWELL, GA., in an oval slug plate. There are no other markings.

The Elberton bottle is embossed ELBERTON BOTTLING WORKS / Koca Nola (in script) / ELBERTON, GA. On the base is a C within a diamond. That manufacturer's mark also can be found on Macon and Atlanta, Georgia Koca Nolas and so far has eluded researchers as to its identity.

The Louisburg bottle is embossed LOUISBURG BOTTLING WORKS / Koca Nola (in script) / LOUISBURG, N.C., inside an oval slug plate.

Mr. Barnett found mention of the Talbotton bottle on Page 110 of the History of Talbot County, Georgia. "Aug. 23, 1906 — Talbotton Bottling Co., is now bottling real Coca-Cola, after a period of bottling Coca-Nola (sic)." So far, no bottles from that northwest Georgia city have surfaced.

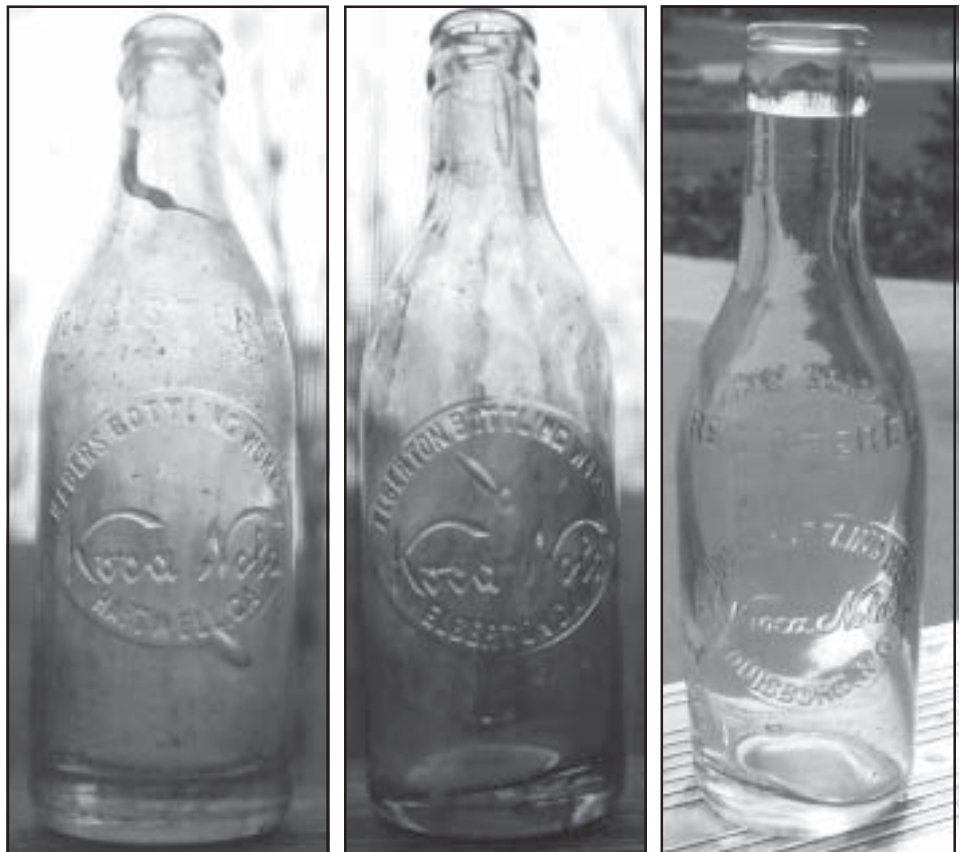

All this makes one wonder what else is out there in Koca Nola Land.
